Amalgamation with Intel...

The PowerPC architecture is lost. Intel Inside rules supremacy...

Steve Jobs has finally made the switched to Intel. He has also sold his other company, Pixar Animations, to Disney. Steve Jobs has converged with the enemy. However, I must shed some light upon this matter. Stevie's new Intel OS X will obviously be written to be run only on Mac, although several people, including I, have managed to successfully hack and patch the Developer Kit version to run on Wintel computers. But think about the flip side... Microsoft hasn't said anything against the installation of the Windows OS on the new Macs... Interesting.

I'm thinking about switching our entire filming operation over to real high resolution video quality. Reason being that in case we ever release our medias on DVD, it won't seem fuzzy or blurry on high-def TVs and panels if we have a higher quality picture. Eventually, when I gather enough greens, I plan to buy a transcoder that will output high-definition S-Video from the [by-then modded] Xbox directly into a S-Video adapter for the camera, which will stream straight into the FCP scratch disk (being the 250GB LaCie drive).

To achieve even higher quality video, we could also use the Xbox 360 consoles for recording, which would have to be provided courtesy of Jon/Evan or Pete...

Pure Pwnage Episode 9 is available for download at www.purepwnage.com. Very funny, might I add.

Hopefully I will soon be releasing a Wahttehhog Compilation 2 video preview for review and critic. Ryan has finally come up with the new series' name: "Sans-Coullette".

So far, I believe we have over 20 minutes or raw footage as well as somewhere around 10 minutes of edited and polished video. As of right now there are no final voice sequences, and like Ryan mentioned on the blog, anyone who thinks their voice is good enough for voice-acting, talk to us.
